1. INTRODUCTION

The Promotion of Access to Information Act, No 2 of 2000 ("PAIA") was established to ensure that responsible parties are transparent in dealing with information, and accountable towards data subjects and their Constitutional rights. PAIA was enacted on 3 February 2000, giving effect to the right of access to any information held by Government, as well as any information held by another person who is required for the exercising or protection of any rights.

We leverage best practice round Information security measures supported by AWS. Some questions are further addressed below:

How are you ensuring that tenant resources are protected from cross-tenant access?	We do implement a RBAC (Role Based Access Control) security mechanism at application service level, which ensures that user access to our system is strictly based on their identity and role they have. In practice this means users who are registered on our platform under the partner, they will only be able to Access the partner's related data, more so, they will not be able to access all the functionalities or information but only that which is in accordance with their role. In other words, we can limit resources within an organization using roles. Outsiders have no access at all to another partner's information.
What controls are in place?	User Authentication and Authorization, RBAC
How is the service secured?	All the traffic to our servers is SSL secured to prevent middleman attack. All traffic goes through our Load balancers which also help in blocking Denial of service attacks. Our cluster is also isolated in a VPC, which means it's not directly reachable, SSH is also disabled this provides an extra layer of security within the perimeter.
What Authentication method are used for: (a) Clients (b) Internal staff (c) admins (d) systems	We use OAuth 2.0 as our backbone for Authentication between our services. Human users, Internal staff, Partners, Admins authenticate using a username and password on our platform via clients that can communicate to our services using OAuth 2.0
How is the segregation of duties achieved?	We have RBAC mechanism in place which makes sure that a user will only have access to information and functionalities that correspond to their role.
